

Black Hawk College music instructor Dr. Irene Apanovitch-Leites co-authored a study that recently was published in American Choral Directors Association's scholarly publication, Choral Journal.

“COVID and the Choral Educator: Preparedness, Perceptions, Attitudes, and a Way Forward” was published in the February 2021 issue.

The study investigated the extent to which choral directors working in collegiate, K-12 and community settings across the U.S. felt they were prepared and equipped to do their job following the shutdown that forced their instruction to be completely virtual.

Read the article.

Dr. Leites is a member of the Art, Design and Performing Arts Department. She oversees the college's choral music program and teaches Theory of Music, Intro to Non-Western Music and Music Appreciation as well as applied voice and piano lessons.

Share this:

- Click to share on Twitter \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Facebook \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to email this to a friend \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to print \(Opens in new window\)
- More