

A

What are some examples of accommodations that are not made or arranged by the Disability Resources & Access Office?

The ADA does not require colleges to provide personal assistants, individual personal tutors, or personal assistive technology. Accommodations are not made which would reduce academic expectations, alter the curriculum or which would eliminate essential components of any course.

Category: Disability Resources & Access